In designing my book “Travel book”, I adhered to a modern publication style. This book overall design emphasizes modern aesthetics, blending the rich diversity of global cultures and landmarks.

For layout design. The cover design, I opted for a clean and striking modern style. Using a full-coverage image as a background, the image features a blue toned mountain range, and the title is set above the image, since this layout is in line with contemporary design trends and captures the reader’s visual interest.

For content part, I focused on highlighting the unique cultural and geographical features of each continent. Each chapter has a distinct layout to reflect its uniqueness. For example, the North America section uses a panoramic cityscape spread across two pages, with text and supplementary images on either side. Since this layout not only showcases the magnificence of the urban landscape but also provides a balanced combination of visual and informational content. This design allows readers to enjoy the scenic beauty while gaining relevant information.

Regarding typography, I selected Adobe kids and Kozuka Mincho Pr6N fonts for the titles and body text. Each continent's name is displayed in bold, accompanied by a brief description summarizing its representative features, which ensure they stand out against the background while remaining easy to read. The body text provides detailed overviews, with a seamless flow between text and images to enhance readability and visual appeal. I also incorporated interactive elements, such as hyperlinks in the table of contents. These links enable readers to quickly navigate to specific sections, making the book more user-friendly and accessible. Additionally, the references section includes links to the images used.

For color selection, I employed a nature-inspired palette to reflect the themes of travel and exploration. Blue serves as the primary color in front cover and back cover, symbolizing the sky and sea, evoking a sense of peace and vastness. The color scheme of each continent's chapter varies to match its unique natural and cultural features. Which reflects the natural and cultural features of each continent. For example, the Asia section uses vibrant reds and golds, while the South America section features greens and yellows, representing its lush landscapes. The photos selected for each section depict iconic landmarks and natural wonders, such as Shanghai in China and Nagoya Castle in Japan, as well as London's Tower Bridge and Iceland's Black Sand Beach in Europe. Since these images instantly evoke a sense of place and enhance the book's visual appeal.

All in all, through these design decisions, my goal is to create a travel book that is not only visually stunning and informative but also provides an immersive reading experience. By combining thoughtful layout choices, typography, and color, I hope offer readers an engaging global adventure.
